

Caruso Day In "Carmen" Almost a Riot

By Spicster Rawling.

"CARMEN" got a special performance at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday afternoon for the benefit of the Emergency Fund of the company, which added more than $15,000 to its bank account. This represents only the proceeds at the box office. What the audience that packed the house from top to bottom actually paid to hear the opera nobody can tell. There were stories afloat that as much as $40 a seat had been realized by the fortunate ones who had paid only $5 a piece for tickets. For hours before the doors were opened—all through the wet night, it was reported, some people had kept vigil—there were long lines of expectant ones stretched around both sides of the building. The veteran Thomas Bull, known and loved by all frequenters of the opera, whose experienced observation may be relied upon, told me that at least 100 people still were clamoring for admission when the order was issued that no more must be permitted to enter.

There was a wild rush for the doors when they were opened that was as unprecedented as it was unprecedented. Women with coupons for seats, who could have waited half an hour and got in with comparative comfort, struggled with those who had bought only admission tickets and were eager to get to coveted standing positions immediately behind the rail. Furs were dropped, dresses were twisted away, tempers were lost and only the coolness of the doormen prevented worse from happening. Fifteen minutes after the curtain rose the air in the auditorium was stifling, but nobody retreated. Those who lingered in the outer lobby until after the first act, and there were many, in the hope that somebody might not stand the strain and be willing to sell a coupon were disappointed. Every woman held on grimly to her place.

There has been nothing like the vogue of the present season's revival of "Carmen" since Mr. Conried first put on "Purcell." Mr. Gatti-Casazza has given it a new cast and staged it well, and Geraldine Farrar has made the hit of her life in the title part. Miss Farrar would be the first to admit, however, as she showed by her frequent attempts to force individual curtain calls upon him, that Caruso was the lion of yesterday. Everybody wanted to hear him once more before he sails on Saturday. He is to make his farewell appearance to-morrow night, when the scenes of yesterday afternoon are likely to be repeated. Encouraged by the audience and helped by Miss Farrar, he gave more than usual indulgence to Caruso antics before the curtain. That the passionate love-making after the flower song in the second act became a burlesque, however, was the fault neither of Caruso nor of Miss Farrar, but of the audience absolutely.

The performance, under Mr. Toscanini's direction, was an admirable one. The cast was the original one save that Francisco Alcantara, who played Lucresia Bori, was Micaela, one of Miss Alda's best parts. Miss Bori paid her the compliment of peeping at her through the glass of a door in the foyer.

Hermann Weil had a chance in last night's repetition of "Fidelio" at the Metropolitan Opera House, to show his capacity. Otto Goretz's indisposition, the first in the many years he has been a member of the company, continued, and Mr. Weil, at short notice, had to impersonate Don Pizarro for the first time in his career. He did it with credit. The performance was excellent. Jacques Frim sang "Friede, Friede" with exceptional power and beauty of voice. Margarete Metzenauer, despite the fact that much of the music is too high for her, came out admirably by her appealing impersonation of Leonore. Elizabeth Schumann, Carl Bruns, Arthur Middleton, Albert Reiss, Max Bloch and Robert Leonard complete an excellent cast. Mr. Harris and the orchestra, between the two scenes of the last act, again gave a fine exposition of the "Leonore" overture No. 2.

William Kroll, a fourteen-year-old violinist, who was born in New York, is to get the funds that may accrue from a benefit concert given at the Hall on Thursday night so that he may go to Bavaria and resume his studies, interrupted by the war, with Hans Marteau, who, as a captured French Lieutenant, is held as a prisoner. The German military officials have granted M. Marteau the privilege of continuing his teaching. Ernest H. Bauer, the boy's teacher here before he was sent abroad, thinks the lad has exceptional talents, and so, it is said, does M. Marteau.

BASS-DRUMMER THE LEADER.

Playing by a deaf and dumb band, none of whose members can hear a note he produces, will take a part in a novel military exhibition to be given Saturday evening, Feb. 20, in the auditorium of the Seventh Regiment, at Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, by the New York Institution of the Deaf and Dumb and crack companies of the regiment.

Each musician in this band plays by sight. His eyes are fixed on the certain notes which certain stops on his instrument. He cannot hear the sounds he produces. He simply follows the rhythm produced by the bass drum, which is the only sensation his ears are capable of communicating to his brain. Other features will be competitive and exhibition drills by the cadet battalions of the institution and picked squads of crack companies of the regiment. Major James Normandy, Twenty-ninth Infantry, U. S. A., who has had charge of the year-long reunions at Gettysburg, will review the manoeuvres. After the drill and concert there will be dancing.

Capt. James Eben of Company E and Capt. Frederick W. Vogel of Company F have charge of the affair.
